

REWRITTEN

EDITING FUTURES PAST

Education + Advocacy + Community + Mobilization

THE WORK.

Every school year there are a select few that rise above. Izik, Suraya, Darrius, Jayde and Laquan are those few this year. ReWritten provided services to over 100 young people this past school year and it is these five that stood out. It was their consistency, dedication and commitment to finish what they started that carried them to the finish line. We wanted to recognize a job well done. That is what this ceremony was about, recognition in front of loved ones and a challenge to press on. Our kids are learning that a job well done will take them places.

THE RISE.

Building operation is much more than turning on the lights. That's what Kurt Sitzman (Able Svcs) and Robert Jones (Shorenstein) shared with some of our participants during our behind the wall tour of the third tallest building in downtown Los Angeles (AON center). From the cooling system that has to carefully calculate even half a degree of temperature change to the sewage system designed to allow a toilet to flush without issue from 60 stories up. Our kids were in awe that anyone, someone could have engineered so much detail and accuracy. Well, now they know and now they know it's just one other possibility for their future. Possibilities for a real future, that's what we're all about. This tour was one for the books. Thank you board member Christina Winstead for setting this up and thank you Kurt and Robert for your time!

THE GIVE.

We are thrilled to be one of several recipients of Bank of America's charitable giving. ReWritten was awarded a $5,000.00 grant towards program development, including STEM related programming and mentoring support. Thank you, Cathy Paredes, Reena Mitchell and Inland Empire Market President, Al Arguello for all the advocacy and support!
